MILLION AIR SETS SIGHTS ON SOUTH AFRICA

HOUSTON, TEXAS November 2015 – Million Air sets sight to add two new locations to its growing global expansion with the introduction of the Million Air brand in South Africa. Golden Wings Aviation will be steering the process starting in 2016 with the first of two green-field build projects, beginning at the Cape Town International Airport which will be completed in early 2017 and the second build at Johannesburg's O.R. Tambo International Airport opening in late 2017. This will mark Million Air's first entrance into the African continent.

"Our introduction with Million Air in the South African market will allow for a gradual but robust introduction to this very elite and unique aviation service offering, and we are extremely excited to be part of this," says Herman Fleischmann, CEO of Golden Wings Aviation.

The first facility plans are to build a boutique FBO at Cape Town International Airport which will offer business and corporate travelers a unique destination, with the ability to serve the airport and sea port hub, all surrounded by a unique peninsula that grows year on year.

Million Air will open the second FBO in Johannesburg which will be credited as the flagship hub of South Africa, designed with state of the art services, amenities and luxury detail recognized in Million Air FBOs worldwide. Both will offer full services by providing, fuel, hangar, ramp, and concierge services.

"We welcome aboard our new partners and are very excited to expand the Million Air network with Golden Wings Aviation in South Africa," said Roger Woolsey, Chief Executive Officer. "We are proud to be connecting with a company where our ideals and commitment to service are paralleled; it's imperative to Million Air's success."
